Tell Me Where It Hurts

Advocating for the User in Our Content and Beyond

Val Swisher, CEO
Content Rules, Inc.

Do you ever feel like you are a doctor, and your patient is your customer? Perhaps you have been told to fix product problems in the documentation. Or perhaps you are testing some procedures you have written and realize that the user interface is confusing or convoluted.

In this session, we will discuss how we advocate for customers while we do our jobs creating user documentation. We will look at ways you can best represent your customer before, during, and after the product is released.

1. What is an Advocate?

2. Benefits of Advocacy

- For Business
- For Users

3. How to Advocate

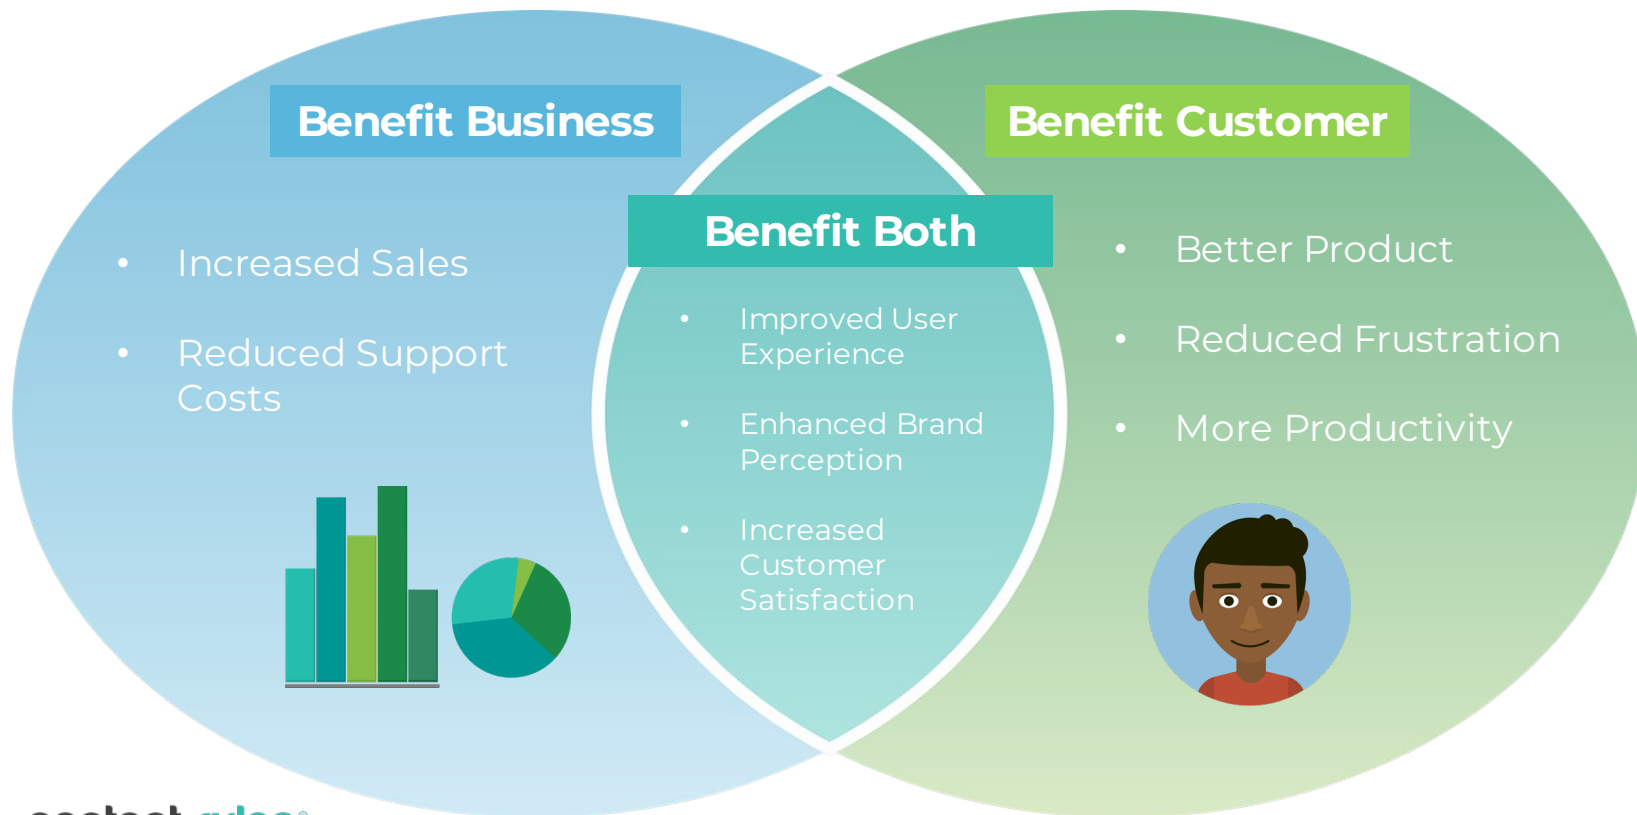

- While Creating Content
- Chatbots
- After Product Ships
- Staying in Touch

What is an Advocate?

- Represents the customer
- Always customer-focused
- Direct communication line between customer and product

How Advocating for the Customer Helps

How User Advocacy Benefits the Business

Increased Sales

Reduced Support Costs

How User Advocacy Benefits the Business — Increased Sales

- Technical content is often used in customer research prior to the sale
- Better written and more accessible content attracts new customers
- Customer satisfaction increases the chances of recurring sales

How User Advocacy Benefits the Business — Reduced Support Costs

- Support content that is easily accessible saves money on live support
- Better documentation makes it easier for support agents and chatbots to help customers

How User Advocacy Benefits Customers

Better Products

Less Frustration

More Productive

How User Advocacy Benefits Customers

- Products are more useful if the customer knows how to correctly use them
- Customers are less frustrated when they don't need to contact support
- Customers can do more with products that have effective documentation

How User Advocacy Benefits the Business and Customers

Improved User
Experience

Enhanced Brand
Perception

Increased Customer
Satisfaction

How User Advocacy Benefits the Business and Customers

- Users have a better experience with the product when we advocate for them
- User advocacy can influence how users see your brand and if they choose your products in the future
- Users need content that is well-written and consistent —confusion leads to frustration

What's a Tech Comm Professional to Do?

How to Advocate

While a Product is in Development

- Keep user focus in mind
- Explain (and re-explain) ramifications of poor design
- Participate in user interface design
- Provide feedback to marketing
- Provide feedback to engineering
- Participate in user testing

TOOLS THAT
DON'T NEED
A MANUAL

NEED A
MANUAL

TOOLS THAT NEED
A MANUAL BUT
DON'T HAVE ONE

TOOLS WHOSE MANUAL
STARTS WITH "HOW TO READ THIS MANUAL"

While Creating Content

- Pay attention to clarity and readability
- Single-source / reuse content
- Use consistent terminology
- Leave out "nice to haves"

Chatbots — User Conversation

- When you write for chatbot, you are having a conversation with your user
- Need to be very careful with words —people don't want to read a lot in a chatbot response
- Try to mimic the customer voice and be conversational

After Product Ships

- Survey content usefulness on webpage
- Survey customers directly
- Collaborate between knowledgebase and tech comm
- Reuse content wherever appropriate

How to Stay in Touch with Customers

- Join (or start) a user community forum
- Get involved in your company's Facebook page
- Check out Twitter mentions
- Join LinkedIn groups
- Learn how to use Reddit

Consider Video Instead of Text

According to HubSpot, 54% of consumers want more videos

According to Forbes, the average user spends 88% more time on a website that has video

According to Wyzowl, 72% of people would rather use video to learn about a product or service

Check Out the Competition and the Non-Competition

- It's easy to get stuck — maybe other people have ideas you haven't considered
- Look at content that is available for products or services completely different from your own
 - Format
 - Structure
 - Media
 - Language
